

MODULE 3 WORKSHEET

Outreach System

Turn verified prospects into short, relevant first-contact messages and a call opener you can actually use.

Module objective: Finish with one usable outbound system: 1 cold email, 3 follow-ups, 1 LinkedIn / DM message, 1 cold-call opener, and prepared responses to the most common objections.

Completion rule

Do not move to Module 4 because the messages sound clever. Move only when a real prospect can immediately understand why you contacted them, why it may matter, and what small next step you are asking for.

1. Campaign context

Use the same sample client / campaign you verified in Module 2. Do not invent a new market just to make the copy easier.

Sample client / company:

What they sell:

Prospect ICP:

Primary buyer / persona:

Main problem or desired outcome:

Primary CTA (reply / short call / demo / estimate / other):

2. One real reason to contact this account

Choose a reason tied to the business - not a generic compliment. Use a verified trigger, responsibility, problem signal, or account characteristic.

Verified observation / trigger:

Why that observation is relevant to the offer:

3. Build the first-touch cold email

Use the four-part structure: Observation -> Relevance -> Value -> Low-friction CTA. Keep each part short enough that the entire message can be understood quickly.

A. Observation - Why this company / person?

Write one verified, specific reason this account was selected.

B. Relevance - Why might they care?

Connect the observation to a plausible problem, priority, risk, or desired outcome.

C. Value - What do you or the client actually help with?

State the mechanism or outcome without hype, fake numbers, or vague growth claims.

D. CTA - What small next step are you asking for?

Ask one simple question that is easy to answer.

Subject line options

Write three short, accurate subject lines. Avoid fake urgency, clickbait, or pretending to know the recipient personally.

3.

Final first-touch email

4. First-touch quality audit

Audit the final email before you use it. A message can be grammatically correct and still be commercially weak.

- | | |
|---|---|
| ☐ The reason for contacting this specific company is visible. | ☐ The observation is verified, not guessed or fabricated. |
| ☐ The message explains a relevant business problem or outcome. | ☐ The value statement is specific enough to understand. |
| ☐ There are no fake case studies, numbers, relationships, or claims. | ☐ The CTA asks for one small next step. |
| ☐ The recipient can answer the CTA with a short response. | ☐ The email can be read comfortably in about 20 seconds. |
| ☐ The wording sounds like a person, not a mass-mail template. | ☐ The reason for outreach still makes sense if challenged. |

Personalization test

Remove the first name and company name. If the email could still be sent unchanged to hundreds of unrelated companies, the relevance is probably too weak.

What specifically prevents this message from being generic?

5. Follow-up sequence

Each follow-up should add context, a new angle, proof, or a lower-friction next step. Do not send repeated "just following up" messages.

Follow-up 1 - Different problem angle

What new context or problem angle will you add?

Follow-up 2 - Useful observation / proof

What useful fact, question, comparison, or proof point can you add?

Follow-up 3 - Close the loop

How will you politely make the final ask or close the sequence?

6. Follow-up sequence quality audit

- ☐ Every follow-up adds something new.
- ☐ No follow-up uses guilt, pressure, or fake urgency.
- ☐ The sequence stays consistent with the same offer and ICP.
- ☐ The CTA remains easy to answer.
- ☐ The final follow-up makes it easy to say no or close the loop.
- ☐ I will stop if the prospect asks not to be contacted.
- ☐ Follow-up timing will follow client policy, platform rules, and applicable law.

7. LinkedIn / direct-message version

A DM is not a shortened email dump. It should feel native to a conversational channel and usually needs less explanation.

DM structure

Specific business reason -> relevant capability -> permission-based next step.

Verified business reason:

Final LinkedIn / DM message:

DM audit

- ☐ It fits on a phone screen without becoming a wall of text.
- ☐ It contains a real business reason for the contact.
- ☐ It does not pretend we already know each other.
- ☐ It does not force a calendar link before interest exists.
- ☐ It gives the recipient an easy way to respond.

8. Cold-call opener builder

Do not write a speech. Build a short map you can speak naturally: Identity -> Reason -> Relevance -> Question.

Identity - who are you / what company are you calling from?

Reason - why are you calling this company / person specifically?

Relevance - what problem or outcome makes the call potentially useful?

Question - what single question invites them into the conversation?

Final spoken opener

30-second test

Read the opener aloud at a normal pace. If it consistently runs beyond about 30 seconds before the prospect can speak, shorten it.

☐ I identify myself honestly.

☐ I give a clear business reason for calling.

☐ I do not claim a relationship that does not exist.

☐ I get to a question quickly.

☐ I can say the opener without reading word-for-word.

☐ I can continue if the prospect interrupts me.

9. Bridge questions after the opener

Write three short questions you can use to learn whether the conversation is worth continuing. Do not interrogate the prospect.

1.

2.

3.

10. Objection response builder

Use the H-E-L-P process: Hear -> Echo / validate -> Learn -> Propose. The goal is not to defeat the objection. The goal is to understand it and decide whether a smaller next step still makes sense.

Not interested

What will you acknowledge?

What one question could reveal whether the issue is relevance, timing, or existing coverage?

What smaller next step, if any, is appropriate?

Send me information

How will you agree without treating this as a booked meeting?

What one question helps you send relevant information?

What follow-up permission will you ask for?

We already have someone / a supplier

How will you acknowledge the existing solution?

What question checks whether they are fully covered?

What alternative / backup / comparison step could be appropriate?

I am busy / call later

How will you respect the interruption?

What will you clarify about timing?

What exact next action will you record?

Additional objection drills

Wrong person

How will you ask for the correct function / person without being deceptive?

Who are you / how did you get my details?

How will you answer honestly and briefly?

No budget / not a priority

What question distinguishes temporary timing from permanent non-fit?

11. Read-aloud rehearsal

Complete this before the quality gate. The objective is recovery and clarity, not memorizing perfect wording.

- ☐ Read the first-touch email aloud once and remove awkward phrases.
- ☐ Say the call opener 5 times without reading after the first attempt.
- ☐ Practice 10 random objection responses.
- ☐ Practice 3 appointment / next-step asks.
- ☐ Record one 60-90 second sample and listen back once.
- ☐ Write only one communication weakness to improve next.

Single biggest communication weakness to improve:

MODULE 3 QUALITY GATE

Outreach System - PASS / REVISE

Do not advance to Module 4 until the complete system is usable in a real campaign.

Pass standard: The outreach is relevant, truthful, concise, easy to respond to, and usable without the student hiding behind a script.

- ☐ I completed 1 final first-touch cold email.
- ☐ I completed 3 follow-ups that each add new value / context.
- ☐ I completed 1 LinkedIn / DM message.
- ☐ I completed 1 spoken cold-call opener.
- ☐ I prepared responses for at least 6 common objections.
- ☐ Every observation and claim is truthful and verifiable.
- ☐ The first-touch message clearly explains why this account was selected.
- ☐ The CTA is small, clear, and easy to answer.
- ☐ The cold-call opener gets to a question in about 30 seconds or less.
- ☐ I can deliver the opener without reading it word-for-word.
- ☐ I can respond to an unexpected objection without restarting the script.
- ☐ There is no fake urgency, fake familiarity, or invented proof.
- ☐ I understand that opt-outs / do-not-contact requests must be honored.
- ☐ The sequence is appropriate for the target channel and campaign rules.
